Maya script, also known as Maya glyphs, was the writing system of the Maya civilization of Mesoamerica and is the only Mesoamerican writing system that has been substantially deciphered. The earliest inscriptions found which are identifiably Maya date to the 3rd century BCE in San Bartolo, Guatemala. Maya writing was in continuous use throughout Mesoamerica until the Spanish conquest of the Maya in the 16th and 17th centuries. Maya writing used logograms complemented with a set of syllabic glyph

Mayan glyphs are a combination of logograms (symbols that represent a word) and syllabograms (symbols that represent a phonetic sound or syllable). Any given word can be expressed by a lone logogram or a combination of syllabograms. Sentences were composed of both of these types of glyphs. A Mayan text was read from top to bottom, left to right.

~~The Maya Used Glyphs for Writing - ThoughtCo~~

Glyphs, a term used to denote the individual alphabets or symbols, formed the basic unit of the language. There were two types of glyphs in the Mayan language, namely logograms and syllabograms. Logograms made use of an image to depict an entire phrase, for instance the depiction of a god to denote him.
